SECTION DEFINITIONS

Colour Definition

A colour image may be full colour or a greyscale image which has been modified or giving the impression of having been modified by partial toning, multi toning or by the inclusion of spot colour on a monochrome image.

Monochrome Definition

An image is considered to be monochrome only if it gives the impression of having no colour (i.e. contains only shades of grey which can include pure black and pure white) or it gives the impression of being a grayscale image that has been toned in one colour across the entire image (for example by sepia, red, gold, etc.) A grayscale or multi-colored image modified or giving the impression of having been modified by partial toning, multi-toning or by the inclusion of spot colouring does not meet the definition of monochrome and shall be classified as a colour work.

Portrait Definition (Colour or Monochrome)

This section includes images of individuals or a group of people that may range from head to waist up studies. It may include accessories or backgrounds that are in character with the subject. The important aspect of a portrait is capturing the personality of a person or group of people by using effective lighting, backdrops, and poses.

Nature Definition (Colour only)

Nature photography is restricted to the use of the photographic process to depict all branches of natural history, except anthropology and archaeology, in such a fashion that a well-informed person will be able to identify the subject material and certify its honest presentation. The story telling value of a photograph must be weighed more than the pictorial quality while maintaining high technical quality. Human elements shall not be present, except where those human elements are integral parts of the nature story such as nature subjects, like barn owls or storks, adapted to an environment modified by humans, or where those human elements are in situations depicting natural forces, like hurricanes or tidal waves. Scientific bands, scientific tags or radio collars on wild animals are permissible. Photographs of human created hybrid plants, cultivated plants, feral animals, domestic animals, or mounted specimens are ineligible, as is any form of manipulation that alters the truth of the photographic statement. No techniques that add, relocate, replace, or remove pictorial elements other than by cropping are permitted. Techniques that enhance the presentation of the photograph without changing the nature story or the pictorial content, or without altering the content of the original scene, are permitted including HDR, focus stacking and dodging/burning. Techniques that remove elements added by the camera, such as dust spots, digital noise, and film scratches, are allowed. Stitched images are not permitted. All allowed adjustments must appear natural. Infrared images, either direct-captures or derivations, are not allowed. If there are doubts about an image, RAW files may be requested.

Social Documentary Definition: (Greyscale monochrome only) (note that this definition has changed.)

Social documentary photography's objective is to highlight social or environmental issues. While often it's advocacy-oriented, it's not inherently so. A county fair, celebrities, fashion, and sports can all fall under the social documentary label. If that sounds like a pretty broad definition, that's because it is. So, it's helpful to keep in mind what social documentary photography is not. It's not breaking news events, conflict zones, wildlife, landscapes, or street photography.

The entrant must ensure that there is no attempt to misrepresent reality by manipulating the image's content, context or meaning through image editing or post-production.

Post-production is limited to minor global adjustments such as spotting dust and scratches, dodging and burning, and adjusting tonal and colour values. Elements or areas within the image cannot be removed or covered up, nor may new elements be added. Cropping the image is permitted. If there are doubts about an image, judges may request RAW files be provided.

Elements Definition (Colour only)

The subject Elements relates specifically to Earth, Wind, Fire and Water or their representations. It can mean forces of nature, but it is not the chemical or spiritual elements. A different or creative approach to the subject is encouraged.
